

Future Fruit: Trees You'll Never See

August 14, 2022

John 12:20-26

This morning we began our new series, Future Fruit. Sometimes God wants to use us in powerful ways to start something that God will use someone else to finish. It's beyond the scope of what we can see. Or maybe even our lives. Future Fruit is an invitation: to join God in the work, care and sacrifice of today for the fruit of tomorrow.

Getting Started

We began a new series on Sunday: Future Fruit. What's your favorite fruit?

Digging Deeper

- The text above is when everything changes in John's gospel. Toran pointed out its connection to John 1:43-46 on Sunday. After reading again, what stands out? Is there anything God revealed to you through this text?
- Toran asked a question on Sunday: what are you willing to give up, put to death, so that others can experience what you have? How did this question resonate with you? How would you respond?
- The pursuit of Future Fruit is to plant trees that others will eat from. How is God asking you to obey Jesus' Golden Rule (Matthew 7:12) and Silver Rule (John 13:5)? Treat others the way you would be treated, and do for others what's been done for you?
